WORKSHOP TIPS AND TRICKS

This month we take a look at air cleaner maintenance.

We all know that the air cleaner's job is to remove dust from the air to allow the engine to run clean air and that the air cleaner is attached to the turbo-charger or engine by a rubber hose.

This hose is subject to high heat, oil residue and constant engine vibration, causing the hose to wear. This wear damage is usually on a bend and not easily picked up at a glance.

When this hose fails it causes the engine to draw in unfiltered air and leads to rapidly increased engine wear, ie; cylinder wear, piston wear, ring wear which in turn can lead to the need for a complete engine rebuild costing anywhere between $5k and $20k dependant on engine.

All this damage can be avoided by closely inspecting this hose at every oil change. If you find signs of wear, including cracks or softening it is time to replace. This hose at a cost of a couple of hundred dollars at the maximum could save you thousands in the long run!

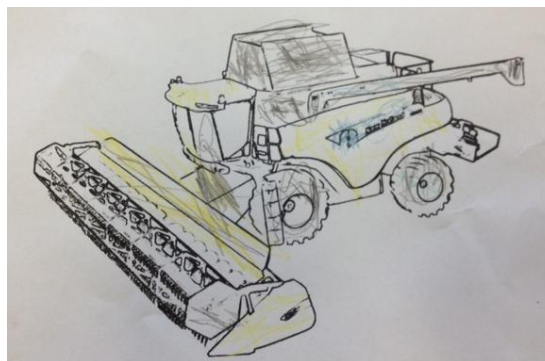

If you are unsure, please feel free to contact our Workshop for inspection.
